Hideaway Still Top Secret*Where's Powers?

Francis Gary Powers was secluded today with members of his family at a hideaway as top-secret as the U-2 spy flights he once made over the Soviet Union.

Powers, 32, freed by the Russians Saturday in exchange for master Soviet spy Rudolph Abel, was flown back to the United States first for a reunion with his wife and parents, and then for intensive government questioning.

Powers faces intensive questioning by government officials—and possibly Congress—on how he was captured while making a high altitude photographic mission over Russia.

One big question is whether the Russians actually shot down his plane at 68,000 feet with a rocket or whether he was forced down by engine trouble.

SENATORS EAGER

Three members of the Senate Armed Services Committee said they believed their group should question Powers after security agents had completed interrogating him.

Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D., Nev.) said he would like to ask Powers about the indoctrination he received on how to act if captured. Sen. Cannon said he was "disappointed in Powers' conduct."

after the U-2 was downed May 1, 1960.

Sens. Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) and Strom Thurmond (D., S. C.) also said they thought the committee should question Powers. Sen. Byrd said he did not think Powers "gave the Russians any information he wasn't supposed to," but he wanted to know how the plane was downed.

Two photographs of Powers released by the White House bore out the description of his physical well-being. He was smiling, and looked well-fed and healthy after two years in a Soviet prison.

HUSH-HUSH

Powers' movements were cloaked with secrecy equal to wartime restrictions. The only official word was a White House announcement that he had returned Sunday morning, was meeting with his family and appeared to be in good physical condition.

It was learned, however, that Powers had landed at the Dover, Del., Air Force base, and it was believed that his meeting with his wife took place at a hideaway within 100 miles of Washington.

There were suggestions that the Powers reunion might have been held on Wallops Island, Va., where the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has a rocket test range.

FREEDOM AHEAD

James B. Donovan, the New York attorney who negotiated the Powers-for-Abel swap, said he had talked with the Russians about release of Marvin W. Makinen, a Massachusetts student, above, who is serving an eight-year term in the Soviet on spy charges, and expects Mr. Makinen to be freed. The student was touring Russia last July when arrested.

The Central Intelligence Agency also is understood to have installations along the Eastern shore of Maryland and Delaware, and probably one of these was selected.

PARENTS VANISH

The movements of Powers' parents were just as mysterious as those of his wife. They left Norton, Va., Saturday evening with a Government agent and vanished under the secrecy veil.

But since the White House announcement referred to "members of his family," Powers presumably was meeting with them as well as with his wife, who flew to Washington from Atlanta Saturday.

Mrs. Powers and her brother, Capt. Jack Moore, an Air Force chaplain, were greeted by two Government agents who escorted them to the Dupont Plaza hotel to spend the night. The two agents occupied an adjoining room.

Shortly before noon yesterday, Mrs. Powers, her brother and one Government agent returned to National Airport and took off about 1:30 p.m. for the home.
